Star Valley Health Breaks Ground for the Expansion of its Alpine Clinic

Madison, Wis. – ERDMAN recently celebrated the groundbreaking for the expansion of Star Valley Health’s (SVH) Alpine Clinic. Located in Wyoming, the project has been years in the making. “It represents SVH’s commitment to serving local patients and will allow SVH to carry out its vision in leading health with unparalleled service and community trust,” says ERDMAN Project Executive Karl Lueschow.

As part of the exciting changes underway, the project’s scope totals 22,500 square feet of developable space. The initial phase will include 12,500 square feet for a family practice, laboratory, imaging, specialty clinic, and urgent care services. The remaining work will be shell space for future development.

In planning for the new clinic, it was important that the design provides a world-class patient experience and is a functionally efficient building to best serve the community. “This is a historic moment for SVH as we break ground for the new Alpine Clinic,” says Foundation President Mark Taylor. “We want to support all individuals, families, and communities in North Lincoln County so they can achieve their best health. Building a state-of-the-art clinic helps us make this vision a reality.”

The groundbreaking was attended by representatives from SVH and ERDMAN, as well as local leaders including former Vice President Dick Cheney with his daughter and Congresswoman Elizabeth Cheney. This project was also made possible with much local support by donors in the Alpine community.

The updated clinic will make healthcare more accessible to a growing population. Scheduled to be completed in spring 2022, “ERDMAN is proud to support SVH and looks forward to when the clinic opens its doors,” says Lueschow. “It will have a big impact in supporting the community’s health and wellbeing.”
